March 15; 11:30 a.m. 1884

Name should be Warwick Courthouse 1884

The fascinating ownership of Balthrope (or Boldrup) reads like a Who's Who of colonial Virginia figures; easily earning it designation on the National Register of Historic Places. In 1626, ancient planter William Claiborne patented 5,000 acres along the Warwick River above Denbigh. Captain Samuel Stevens next acquired the estate in 1631. His wife, Frances Culpeper, inherited the estate upon his death. Governor Sir William Berkeley married the wealthy widow, and sold the 1,350-acre plantation to his close advisor Colonel William Cole in 1671. ### NATURALLY SPEAKING LECTURE SERIES: LAURA GREENLEAF

Virginia Living Museum

March 16; 6 to 7 p.m. p.m.

Artificial light at night is essential to our lives, communities, and society. But the routine indiscriminate use of too much badly-designed lighting degrades ecosystems, imperils wildlife, and fails to deliver on promises of improved safety and security while also eroding our own health. What do we lose when we obliterate the stars from the night sky and darkness below it? This presentation will explore the causes and consequences of light pollution, explain the basics of responsible outdoor lighting, deliver good news about nightscape conservation, and equip the audience to bring back the night beginning at home. Because every day needs a night. Click here for details.
